INTERNATIONAL SUMMER PROGRAMMES

An opportunity to gain credit and learn about vital business environments while discovering the South of France

GLOBALISING EUROPE

The Globalising Europe course combines a hands-on business perspective with historical, cultural and economics analysis. Topics of key interest to students unfamiliar with European institutions, nations and the particular problems in constructing a European Union and at the same time, globalising enterprises outside the union will be examined. Through this 3-week course, participants will be acquainted with know-how in European business, economic challenges and the larger political and cultural framework that encapsulates the European Economic Community.

◆ COMPARATIVE BUSINESS MODELS IN EUROPE – 15 hours

The seminar provides students with insights into the complexities of the European environment from business, corporate governance, economic and finance perspectives. The course is organised in four modules discussing different European business models. Participants learn to apply a broad comparative corporate governance lens to understand how doing business in Europe works. Recent challenges in the European economic and business landscape will be covered: the immigration crisis, the Brexit, the euro crisis and the regional independence movement.

◆ CROSS-CULTURAL CHALLENGES: EUROPEAN DIVERSITY – 15 hours

The course considers European cultures in terms of the social factors that impact economies and determine consumption and behaviour. An historical evaluation of how different value systems function economically and the contexts which allow for a successful combination of economic policy and growth allows for gaining perspective on social and cultural change in recent times and understanding how values prompt prosperity, the use of technology and social change. This is an interdisciplinary course drawing from economic history, sociology, political science and cultural studies.

◆ EUROPEAN INSTITUTIONS AND COMMUNITY ORGANISATION – 15 hours

The seminar provides an introduction into the political system of the European Union, its different institutions, and decision-making processes. The genesis of this unique system of multilevel governance will be explained as well as the configuration and competences of the European Commission, Council and Parliament. System reform and consideration of the European experience as a model for other regions of the world will be considered. The course will consist of interactive lectures and role-play in the second part of the course, in which the students will simulate a negotiation in the European Council.

LEISURE AND LIFESTYLE

Leisure is an important part of a maturing capitalist economic model. Consumers in mature economies are now able to make the choice to forego wages from work to enjoy leisure and lifestyle pursuits. This is particularly noticeable in European democracies where citizens benefit from more vacation days than the world average. Through this 3-week course, participants will examine a few mainstream players of the leisure economy, using models based in the region of Nice and Grasse as live case studies of the companies and consumers that inhabit the leisure economy. Three focus courses will combine background literature, in situ learning and a consultancy based evaluation framework to become acquainted with this emerging part of today's economy.

◆ THE ECONOMIC CONTEXT OF LEISURE – 15 hours

This course will see leisure in terms of its macro-economic impact in France and in Europe. Providing a comparative framework for understanding growth markets in leisure and lifestyle products and services, the relative size and potential of different markets and different concentrations throughout France and Europe will be covered. This course will provide a general economic outlook on Leisure Markets in the 21st century (sectors, size, growth potential, key regions, key figures) drawing from a range of examples in lifestyle innovation, ecotourism, work/life balance trends and culture and the creative industries.

◆ CONSUMING LEISURE – 15 hours

This course will consider consumer analysis and market strategies for leisure and lifestyle considering new consumer profiles, ethics and sustainability trends as well as new service opportunities focused on the affluent and the retired. The course takes a panoramic view on consumer culture analysis methods, information gathering and emerging consumer socio-styles.

◆ ENTREPRENEURIAL LEISURE – 15 hours

This course explores leisure innovation, reviewing past and future strategies and opportunities in lifestyle markets. Leisure entrepreneurship includes the prospective research underpinning new lifestyle trends especially free time including games, mobile connections, tourism, well-being, spirituality, exercise, sports, culture, activism and reading. Taking a panoramic view of leisure, the course investigates French specialties in the leisure markets (games, videos, and tourism for example) and proposes a framework for which entrepreneurs and consumers can evaluate, interact and innovate with the many lifestyle options available in mature western democracies.

“I was familiar with EDHEC's excellent reputation through the “Doing Business In (DBI)” exchange partnership with my school, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Kenan-Flagler Business School where I earned my MBA.

When I chose Leisure & Lifestyle summer programme, I knew that I was getting quality instruction and experiences because of EDHEC's supportive business partners and professors. As an already working professional, I was already used to working and attending graduate school year round; attending a summer program was par for the course. Summer is a great time to continue education because the pace of daily campus life is generally more relaxed, which encourages better student-teacher communication, new perspectives, and information retention. I really enjoyed learning about different industries and the unique needs of businesses in a new geographical area, France. I gained exposure to France-based companies and international perspectives that I can contribute to any of my future endeavors. Additionally, having the opportunity to meet other business students from around the world was priceless. I made great connections with my fellow classmates, which really enriched my academic/professional network. I would absolutely recommend it! The EDHEC Summer Programme was a very positive experience and I look back on both my personal and educational memories fondly.”

GREAT INSIGHTS INTO EUROPEAN MARKETS

"I am an engineer who would like to further myself in Business Finance. It was not hard to choose EDHEC Nice Campus for my exchange being the 3rd ranking School of Business in the world in Finance, FT 2019 ranking, offers great insight into the European markets, and with a stunning location in the French Riviera, where else would you rather be? The world is rapidly changing, protectionism and political polarisation are rapidly changing the global markets, how should a business adapt in these times? This programme dissects the cultural, language and institutional aspects of the single European market and is essential knowledge to do business within the single market. We also produced a case study for fragrance and flavor consultants that advise the local business clusters of fragrance and flavour in Grasse."
